Objective	This seminary aims to develop students's capacity to make of bibliographical searches in order to write an article in a specific subject
Content	The course aims at comparing the problem of composabilité - which results from preKantian ontologies, from that of Leibnitz- with the doctrine of the transcendental schematism of Kant. It is a question of thinking about what prevents us from seeing the multiplicity which has not happened yet - in the universe and in the historic world has - as a phenomenon. The course looks for an answer to the question asked by Alain Badiou (has the dialectic closed branches?) in his comment on the Hegelian dialectic.
References	Recent works and various sources of the history of philosophy: Descartes, Kant, Leibniz, Deleuze, Badiou
