Language of Instruction	English
Course Type	Elective
Course Level	Masters Degree
Objective	This course provides Master's students with an in-depth understanding of international migration, forced migration, asylum, and refugee movements. It analyses international refugee protection regimes and the policies implemented at national, regional, and international levels to manage forced migration and refugee flows. Key topics include the securitisation of migration, large-scale refugee movements, internally displaced people, and exclusionary policies towards refugees and asylum seekers. The course also addresses humanitarian crises resulting from forced migration, protracted refugee situations, refugee camps, and climate-induced displacement, as well as the safe and voluntary return of refugees.
Content	This course is part of the Jean Monnet Chair in Migration Governance for Sustainability and Resilience (MIGOSUR) and is supported by the Erasmus+ Programme of the European Union. This course provides an in-depth examination of international migration, focusing on forced migration, asylum, and refugee movements. It critically analyses international refugee protection regimes and policies at various levels to address forced migration and refugee crises. Topics include the securitisation of migration, border management, exclusionary policies, humanitarian responses, and climate-induced displacement.
