Language of Instruction	French
Course Type	Compulsory
Course Level	Bachelor Degree
Objective	Main purpose of the course is to introduce students to the specific perspective of historical sociology concerning the construction of modern state in Europe within a comparative perspective in Ottoman Empire. The transformation of the state into a nation state, the development and spread of nationalism and citizenship constitute the second major component of the course.
Content	In the introduction we will discuss three classical works such as three sociological logics which conceptualize differently the state question: Marx, Durkheim and Weber. After acquisition of the classical theories of the State we will study the emergence of the modern state under a historical and sociological light. In the process of statization; from absolutist state to Nation state we will analyze the link between politics and society to better understand the diversity and specificity of the modern state. The last part of the course will be devoted to the phenomena of nation and nationalism in relationship with citizenship and to roles played by State in national construction and development.
