Content	This course will examine the relationship between cultural products and the formation of identities, both individual and social. We will examine how cultural products such as songs, photographs, film, TV, social media content, and museum exhibitions, as well as some everyday products such as maps and ID cards, represent and form different social and cultural groupings, with a particular emphasis on gender, race, ethnicity, class, and nationality. Each session consists of two parts: a theoretical introduction based on readings and in-class analyses of cultural products.
