Objective	Technology and communication tools are developing rapidly today; advertising principles and strategies can not be expected to remain the same. With the widespread use of mobile phones and the development of digital marketing, the target audience and customers have become more accessible. In this course, it is aimed to provide students with theoretical and practical knowledge about all the aspects of mobile marketing and advertising via the leading companies and to enable them to participate in the mobile marketing and advertising processes of those companies.
Content	The course will have the theoretical and practical knowledge on topics such as media planning, digital and social media advertising, measurement and analysis, mobile application development and marketing technologies, mobile commerce, and payment tools, and digital content creation and planning.
