Objective	The aim of this course is to enable communication faculty students to use the concepts they employ in the field of media accurately, appropriately, and consciously on a philosophical and ethical basis, and to contribute to their development as media professionals who are able to recognize ethical issues encountered in various fields such as journalism, radio, television, cinema, advertising, public relations, and digital media, analyze these issues through critical thinking skills, and develop solutions grounded in ethical reasoning. The course seeks to encourage students to approach ethical principles not merely as normative rules, but within the framework of social responsibility, human dignity, public interest, and the ethics of care; to establish connections between theory and practice by critically examining media productions from an ethical perspective; and to design alternative and ethically grounded media practices.
Content	This course is structured as a two-semester program that approaches the field of communication and media from a philosophical perspective and aims to relate the fundamental concepts and approaches of ethical thinking to media practices. In the first phase of the course, key concepts such as ethics, morality, responsibility, public interest, privacy, representation, critical thinking, and logical fallacies are discussed within the framework of philosophical communication; the relationship between language, power, and media is examined through theoretical texts and illustrative examples. In the second phase, professional ethics principles specific to journalism, radio, television, cinema, advertising, public relations, and digital media are addressed through national and international ethical codes as well as contemporary media cases. The course is supported by applied studies focusing on the identification and analysis of ethical dilemmas and the development of possible solutions; throughout the semester, students gain experience in developing ethically grounded alternative media practices by linking theoretical knowledge with concrete media productions through ongoing media observation and critique activities.
